From TriState Health Foundation's Chief Development Officer

As we reflect on 2025, I am deeply grateful for the collective generosity and commitment that continues to fuel the mission of TriState Health, "Your Health Is our First Priority." This past year, was one of both challenge and progress, and through it all, our donors, partners, and volunteers stood firmly beside us – ensuring that high-quality, compassionate care remains accessible to the communities we serve.

Philanthropy is more than financial support; it is a vote of confidence in what is possible. Because of you, TriState Health continues to grow, in advancing services to strengthen patient care and invest in the health and well-being of our region. Your generosity helps fund innovative programs, lifesaving technology, and essential support services that make a tangible difference in the lives of patients and families every day.

In 2025, we also focused on building stronger, more sustainable relationships with our supporters. We listened, learned, and worked to ensure that every gift, regardless of size, was stewarded with transparency, accountability, and impact. This commitment remains central to our work. We are proud to share the results of your generosity in this report, which highlights not only financial milestones, but also the human stories behind them.

As healthcare continues to evolve, so too must philanthropy. The needs of our communities are growing more complex, and the role of charitable investment has never been more vital. Together, we are not simply responding to today's needs – we are building a healthier future. One where innovation thrives, equity is prioritized, and every individual has the opportunity to receive exceptional care.

On behalf of the TriState Health Foundation team, THANK YOU for your trust, your partnership, and your belief in our mission. Your support inspires us daily and makes our work possible. We look forward to continuing this journey with you in the year ahead.

D'LYNN OTTMAR, CDO

From TriState Health's Chief Executive Officer

At TriState Health, providing high-quality, patient-centered care close to home remains at the heart of our mission. This commitment continues to guide our strategy and shape our culture across all our facilities on both sides of the river. These efforts are made possible through the extraordinary support of the TriState Health Foundation team and Board of Trustees, whose leadership and dedication play a vital role in advancing care for our community.

In 2025, the Foundation achieved a truly remarkable milestone through its largest annual fundraising event, the Festival of Trees. Thanks to the generosity of our community, the event raised over $1 million—an incredible testament to the trust and belief our donors place in TriState Health. One tree alone sold for an astounding $420,000, underscoring the deep commitment our supporters have to strengthening local healthcare.

Last year, the Foundation was able to donate a substantial amount toward imaging services, further enhancing access to critical diagnostic care for our region. In addition, Foundation support helped fund infant warmers, ensuring our youngest and most vulnerable patients receive the safest, highest-quality care from their very first moments.

Beyond these significant contributions, the Foundation continues to be a vital partner in meeting the evolving needs of our hospital by supporting technology, equipment, and services that allow our care teams to deliver exceptional care. Every gift, large or small, has a direct and meaningful impact on the lives of our patients and families.

Each business, community partner, and individual who supports TriState Health, whether through financial contributions or words of encouragement, is the lifeline of our organization. Your generosity ensures that we remain the only non-profit, community-owned hospital serving the Lewis-Clark Valley. Thank you for standing with us and believing in our mission.

TriState Health Foundation AWARDS

SPIRIT AWARD

This business has gone above and beyond with their generosity to TriState Health, the Foundation, and the Lewis-Clark Valley. They understand and believe in the value of our community-owned and operated hospital. We are grateful for their dedication to supporting local non-profit organizations, their understanding of the importance of non-profits and how they serve our community.

We would like to honor Phoenix Radiology as our Spirit Award Winner. Thank you again for your continued generosity.

OUTSTANDING TRUSTEE AWARD

Our Outstanding Trustee Award is determined by the TriState Health Foundation staff. This award is presented to someone who has gone the extra mile, often behind the scenes, throughout the entire year to help with the success of TriState Health Foundation's fundraising efforts. This person stepped up to help with all of our events before, during, and after, and they were attentive and helpful every step of the way. They shared new ideas and offered assistance whenever needed; they are an extraordinary asset to us. The Outstanding Trustee Award goes to Anna Lawrence.

LEE MARTIN AWARD

In 1997, the TriState Health Foundation began a tradition to acknowledge the “above and beyond” support and dedication of one of their Trustees. The Lee Martin Award is TriState Health Foundation’s highest honor and the recipient is nominated by their fellow Trustees. Lee Martin was a gentleman whose dedication and support of TriState Health Foundation and TriState Health truly made a difference which helped mold today’s TriState Health Foundation.

Criteria for the Lee Martin Award:

- This award is limited to TriState Health Foundation Trustees only
- This award is given annually
- The recipient must have been a board member for a minimum of 2 years
- The recipient should have good meeting attendance (70%)
- Time and effort must be contributed to a special event by the recipient
- The recipient will have been actively involved with other Foundation committees
- The recipient will have given monetary support within their means
- The recipient enthusiastically supports the goals of the Foundation

Without further ado, the 2025 Lee Martin Award goes to Brook Brown.

Thank you for everything you do for TriState Health Foundation.

Brook is consistently present, highly collaborative, and deeply dependable. With a positive attitude and a strong willingness to take on additional responsibility, she makes a meaningful difference across the Board and exemplifies the spirit and values of this award.

Trustee

A LEGACY OF CARING

Investing in TriState Health's Family Medicine Residency Program

For Dave and Sharon Mudra, giving back has never been an obligation, it has always been a natural extension of who they are.

Dave and Sharon met in 1965 and collectively they built their lives around education, service, and caring for others. Dave taught history and economics for nearly three decades, helping students understand the practical skills they needed to succeed in life. Sharon taught alongside him in physical education. She coached, advised, and mentored generations of students. Together, they helped shape the future for hundreds of children. Their classrooms, gymnasiums, and athletic fields were filled with young people who saw them as trusted adults, role models, steady supporters, and family.

After retiring, the Mudras moved to Clarkston in 1999 to care for Sharon's mother. They later provided care to additional family members, including Dave's aunt, Harriet, for nearly a decade. Caring for their elders, walking alongside loved ones through significant medical challenges, and experiencing healthcare up close shaped their belief in the importance of strong, accessible, local medical services. "We've watched a lot of family go through medical problems over the years," Sharon said. "We feel like supporting TriState Health was the thing to do, a local hospital that offers such great services."

Since settling in the Lewis-Clark Valley, TriState quickly became an anchor in the Mudras' lives. From routine care to urgent needs, they relied on TriState providers often, and they personally saw the compassion and dedication that define community-owned healthcare. "We just believe TriState does things the right way," Sharon shared. "Patients come first. It's all about care. Not profit."

Their philanthropy to TriState began long before the hospital announced its new Family Medicine Residency Program. Over the years, Dave and Sharon contributed to imaging upgrades, expansion projects, and other initiatives that enriched local care. They attended fundraising events, connected deeply with staff, and became champions for the hospital's mission.

But their generosity extends far beyond healthcare. Throughout their years in the Lewis-Clark Valley, the Mudras have quietly supported numerous local nonprofits and community causes, including education levies and initiatives, the animal shelter, Habitat for Humanity, public radio and TV, and organizations needing help meeting essential needs. Giving locally, they said, has always been their way of strengthening the community they love. "We've been very fortunate in our lives," Dave noted. "If we can help a little here and a little there, that's what we want to do."

When they learned about TriState Health's new residency program, the Mudras knew immediately they wanted to support it.

TriState Health is currently in the planning phases of launching a Family Medicine Residency Program, one of only four residency programs in the nation hosted by a Critical Access Hospital. Developed with academic sponsorship from Washington State University's Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine, this program aims to address the urgent need for primary care providers in rural Washington and the Lewis-Clark Valley.

For the Mudras, that partnership made the decision to give even more meaningful. Both Dave and Sharon attended Washington State University, giving them a lifelong connection to the institution. They have supported the Elson S. Floyd College of Medicine for years, believing in its mission to train physicians who serve Washington's communities. Supporting TriState's new residency program felt like a natural progression, an opportunity to strengthen the connection between the medical school they believe in, and the local hospital they trust.

The Mudras believe this effort is not only timely but essential. "When we found out about the program, we jumped right in," Sharon said. "It's such a great idea. We need to keep doctors local."

Their belief is rooted in personal moments of care. After the passing of their longtime primary physician, the Mudras transitioned to TriState Family Practice & Internal Medicine where they quickly felt the strength and compassion of TriState's clinical team. They have also experienced firsthand care from TriState Minor Care, TriState Emergency, and have spent time in the PIFCU Inpatient Wing. The reliability, continuity, and personal nature of TriState's providers and every individual who touched their journey has reinforced their desire to help bring more providers to the area.

"The doctors in this program will get excellent training," Sharon noted. "And if some of them stay in this community, that would be wonderful. We just don't have enough doctors and rural communities really feel that."

When asked what message they would share with future physicians or community members, Dave and Sharon's answer was simple: "Nothing in life is free. If you want quality healthcare and want to be well taken care of, you should be willing to support the people providing it."

Their philanthropic philosophy is one of gratitude and responsibility. They have saved diligently throughout their lives and now they feel privileged to invest in causes that make life better for others. They have also included TriState Health Foundation in their legacy giving plans, passing forward their commitment to community health for future generations. "We just want to make life better," Sharon said. "Hopefully our legacy is that we did something good."

The Mudras' generosity will directly support the creation of a residency program that will train the next generation of family doctors, providers who understand rural medicine, who choose meaningful patient relationships, and who may stay to serve the Lewis-Clark Valley for decades to come.

Their gift is more than a donation, it is an investment in people, in local healthcare, and in the belief that small communities deserve world-class medical care close to home. TriState Health is deeply grateful for Dave and Sharon's vision, trust, and unwavering commitment to strengthening the future of healthcare in our region. Their story is a reminder of what community philanthropy makes possible and how lifelong educators can continue changing lives long after retirement.

Why The Healing Garden Matters: A Space for Life's Hardest Moments

D'Lynn's Story

Before it became a campaign, the Healing Garden was a lifeline. In this personal reflection, D'Lynn Ottmar, Chief Development Officer of the TriState Health Foundation, shares the moment she discovered how a quiet space in nature can bring clarity, comfort, and strength during life's most difficult decisions.

I never imagined that one of the most difficult decisions of my life would be made in a garden. I'm D'Lynn Ottmar, Chief Development Officer at TriState Health Foundation. In September 2018, I moved back home to the Lewis-Clark Valley to help care for my parents and be closer to family, not realizing how little time I had left with my dad.

In May 2019, my dad became ill. At first, we thought it was a cold or the flu, but it wasn't. One day, he collapsed and was rushed to Spokane. I received a call telling me he needed emergency surgery. After a harrowing procedure and days in the hospital, doctors sat us down to explain his condition and the options before us. None of them were easy and none offered the future we hoped for.

At some point, the responsibility fell to me to make a life-altering decision: whether to let my dad go. I needed air. I needed space. I needed somewhere to breathe.

Across the hall from my dad's hospital room was a garden. As I sat there on the phone with my aunt, explaining my dad's condition and the choices we faced, I could hear her grief and fear echo my own. Inside the hospital were beeping monitors, bright lights, and clinical conversations. Outside was quiet. There was greenery, fresh air, and a place that allowed me to slow down.

Sitting in that garden didn't erase the pain, but it softened the edges. Watching the leaves move in the wind, seeing bees drift from flower to flower, hearing birds sing...it grounded me. It gave me the privacy and clarity I needed to focus, to breathe, and to make a decision that would forever change our lives.

In that space, surrounded by nature, I found the strength to do what I knew my dad would want, even though it broke my heart. The garden didn't make the decision for me, but it made it possible for me to face it. That experience is why the Healing Garden matters.

Every day, families are asked to make impossible choices during moments of deep vulnerability. Providers and nurses carry the weight of delivering devastating news. A Healing Garden offers more than beauty, it offers peace in chaos, comfort in grief, and strength when it is needed most. Today, TriState Health Foundation is seeking visionary partners to help raise $750,000 to create and sustain this sacred space for generations to come, so it is available for every patient, family member, and employee who needs a place to pause, gather strength, and breathe.

Significant naming opportunities are available for those who wish to honor a loved one, celebrate a legacy, or demonstrate a deep commitment to compassionate care. A named Healing Garden, water feature, pathway, seating area, privacy fencing, or contemplative element becomes a lasting tribute, one that will offer comfort to hundreds of families each year.

We at the Foundation invite you to consider a gift that reflects the importance of this space. Your investment will help ensure no family has to face life's hardest moments without a place to breathe. Together, we can make healing possible, even in the midst of goodbye.

The Arnone Family, Generations of Giving Back

Scott and Lori Arnone have supported TriState Health for more than 30 years because they believe deeply in the power of exceptional, local healthcare. "Great healthcare matters. The availability of outstanding surgical staff matters," Scott shares. "As we look ahead to our own future health needs, supporting the Surgery and Clinic Expansion is incredibly important."

For the Arnones, access to high-quality surgical care close to home is essential. Not only for themselves, but for everyone who calls the Lewis-Clark Valley home. "I do not want to travel for my surgical needs," Scott says. "Having the ability to remain in our valley and rely on our own surgical services is important for our entire community."

The Surgery & Clinic Expansion will complete TriState Health's P1FCU Inpatient Wing, ensuring the best possible care for patients who require surgical services. Just as importantly, it reinforces what makes TriState Health truly unique. "Community-owned means community-centered care," Scott explains. "This hospital has never changed ownership, and it has never lost sight of its guiding principle: the patient always comes first." Every dollar invested stays right here, strengthening care and benefiting the community as a whole.

Scott's connection to TriState Health runs deep. The hospital has been part of his family's life for more than 50 years. His mother, Joanne Shears, worked at TriState for 33 years and served as Director of Nursing. "They gave my mother so many opportunities and helped her succeed in countless ways," Scott recalls. During her 12-year cancer journey, TriState supported her with compassion—providing time to heal, continued pay, and deep appreciation for her dedication. Joanne's passion for TriState Health, along with her love for vintage fashion, inspired her to start the Holiday Tea and Vintage Style Show, now known as the High Tea, which continues today in her honor.

Supporting TriState Health is a true family tradition for the Arnones. Scott began volunteering on the TriState Health Foundation Board of Trustees in 1991 before joining the TriState Health Board of Directors in 1997. Lori contributed for many years as a Festival of Trees designer—a tradition now carried on by their daughters, Adrianna Druffel and Jade Arnone. Trevor Arnone has served on the TriState Health Foundation Board of Trustees since 2013.

The Arnone family embodies a commitment to honoring the past, strengthening the present, and investing in the future of their community. "TriState provides the best care in our valley, and we are so fortunate to have them," Scott says. TriState Health and the Foundation are equally fortunate to have the Arnone family's unwavering generosity, leadership, and support!

A NIGHT TO REMEMBER:

FESTIVAL OF TREES

The 41st Annual Festival of Trees, presented by the TriState Health Foundation, was nothing short of extraordinary. It was a powerful celebration of generosity, creativity, and community spirit that will be remembered for years to come.

In November 2025, the Clearwater River Casino & Lodge Event Center glowed with holiday magic as dozens of beautifully decorated trees, each designed by local businesses, families, and community partners, filled the room with warmth and wonder. What unfolded over the course of the Festival went far beyond tradition. It became a defining moment for local healthcare and a testament to what is possible when a community comes together with a shared purpose.

Thanks to remarkable community support, the Festival raised an unprecedented $1,088,768, making it the most successful fundraising event in the TriState Health Foundation's history. These funds will directly support the expansion of critical healthcare services in the Lewis-Clark Valley, ensuring patients and families can access high-quality care close to home.

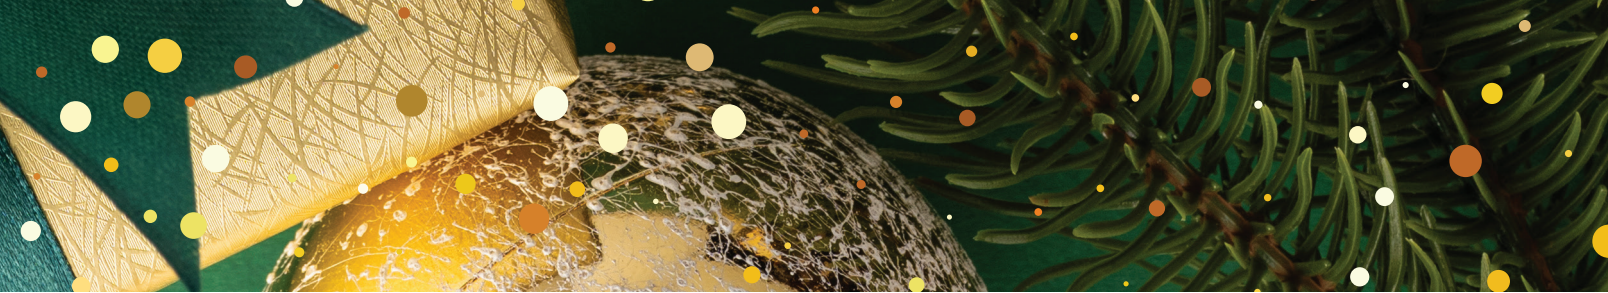

A defining moment of the evening came during the live auction with the show-stopping tree titled, "Christmas in the Canyon." What began as spirited bidding quickly became a powerful display of generosity and shared commitment. The final bidding unfolded between Gary and Jutta Hughes and Cristina Wright, whose enthusiastic participation helped elevate the moment into Festival of Trees history. Cristina's willingness to bid boldly and wholeheartedly reflected her deep belief in the mission of TriState Health Foundation, and her involvement made the record-breaking outcome possible. When the Hughes family ultimately secured the tree with a $420,000 bid, the room erupted in applause, recognizing not only the historic total, but the extraordinary generosity demonstrated by everyone involved.

Inspired by the rugged beauty of Hells Canyon and the Snake River, "Christmas in the Canyon" was a stunning tribute to the region's landscape and sense of adventure. The tree was brought to life through a collaboration of local designers whose creativity and craftsmanship captured the spirit of the Northwest and the heart of the Festival. Designers included Karrie Hughes Kay (Hughes Foundation), Debbie Zenner (DZ Design), Kaitlyn Loeth (Stonebraker McQuary), and Randi Kilcup (Inland Cellular). The display was anchored on a handcrafted jet boat base fabricated by students from Walla Walla Community College's Clarkston Campus welding program, adding a meaningful layer of local pride and ingenuity.

The impact of the evening extended well beyond the tree auction. During the Raise the Paddle portion of the program, approximately $380,000 was raised in support of the Foundation's Surgery & Clinic Expansion, helping advance expanded surgical capacity and outpatient services. A transformational gift of $250,000 from Chris Schmidt, given in honor of the late Rick Wasem, and two $25,000 donations from Don McQuary and the Arnone Family further underscored the powerful role philanthropy plays in shaping the future of healthcare in our region.

While the numbers were historic, the true success of the 41st Annual Festival of Trees was found in the shared sense of purpose that filled the room. Sponsors, designers, volunteers, donors, and attendees came together in a joyful reminder that investing in healthcare is an investment in one another, in neighbors, families, and future generations.

As D'Lynn Ottmar, Chief Development Officer of TriState Health Foundation, reflected, "This year's Festival of Trees was epic, it showcased what makes this community extraordinary. Every gift, large and small, reflects a commitment to ensuring everyone in the Lewis-Clark Valley has access to exceptional healthcare."

As the lights dimmed and the final bids were called, one thing was clear. The Festival of Trees continues to be a beacon of hope and generosity. The 41st Annual Festival of Trees not only exceeded expectations, it strengthened the Foundation's ability to serve, heal, and grow alongside the community it proudly supports.

"Christmas in the Canyon" was the show-stopping tree that sold for a record setting $420,000! Thank you again to Gary and Jutta Hughes for making the largest tree purchase in the history of the Festival of Trees. Additional thank you to Cristina Wright for bidding and to the tree designers Deb Zenner, Karrie Hughes Kay, Kaitlyn Loseth, and Randi Kilcup, along with their tree sponsor, Inland Cellular.

Memorials & Tributes

There are times when a card or flowers just are not enough, which is why a tribute or memorial gift to TriState Health Foundation may better express your emotion. A tribute gift is a beautiful way to celebrate a birth, anniversary, or another special occasion, or to let someone dear know you are thinking of them. A memorial gift is for when you would like to honor the life of someone special who has passed on. Your gift will give joy and comfort to loved ones, while also helping TriState Health continue to provide excellent and compassionate care.

Your kindness makes a BIG difference

Your support is essential for TriState Health to advance healthcare technology and expand their services to meet our community's diverse needs. Your generosity enhances the patient experience, ensuring compassionate care and a nurturing environment for patients and their families. Together, we can significantly impact the health and well-being of those we serve.

PLANNED GIVING

A planned gift is a contribution arranged in the present and allocated at a future date. We have outlined how different giving strategies can help you make gifts most effectively.

MEMORIAL TRIBUTE

TriState Health Foundation welcomes memorial and tribute gifts, which may be given to honor a special relative, friend, or associate. Gifts are given to provide a meaningful and lasting memorial or to celebrate a loved one's special occasion. Donations may be unrestricted gifts or designated for a specific purpose or area at the hospital. Notification is sent to the honoree or family. The amount of your gift will not be mentioned.

HEALTHCARE SCHOLARSHIPS

The TriState Healthcare scholarship and development program is administered by TriState Health and funded through a scholarship fund created by TriState Health Foundation and Dr. E. Wayne and Vivian Day.

GRATEFUL PATIENT

Grateful Patient is an opportunity to say thank you to a specific team or individual who provided you or a loved one high-quality healthcare.

NATIONAL DOCTORS' DAY

Write a note of appreciation and nominate your provider or make a donation to recognize their compassionate care and expert skills.
